PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco.

San Francisco, August 28.—A company of Rhode Island capitalists have obtained a contract for constructing a railroad in Ecuador from San Buenaventura to Bogota, a distance of about 240 miles. It is reported that the Chief Engineer in the employ of the Company is on his way to this city and will make up a party here soon after his arrival.

San Francisco, August 28.—Gen. John F. Miller has declined to accept the appointment of Major General of the California State Militia.

San Francisco, August 28.—The argument in the habeas corpus case of twenty two Chinese women was finished this evening in the Fourth District Court and Judge Morrison will render his decision at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The trial of W. F. Losign, the celebrated safe expert and agent for burglary, was concluded in the municipal court to-night. He had been tried two or three times and the juries disagreed, but in the present trial after an absence of only five minutes, the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

[illegible] California.

San Diego, August 28.—A Union correspondent from San Luis Rey, under date of 26th inst., has the following: We met here Justo Chavez the robber hunter. About three weeks ago he and his companion, Isador Redonta, who are in pursuit of Chapez, the Lieutenant of Vasquez, overtook him at Aqua Chile[illegible] just beyond Ballena valley and shots were exchanged. The Lieutenant was well mounted and easily escaped the wearied horses of his pursuers. Justo starts to-morrow for Milquatty, having reliable information that Chapez is in that vicinity.

San Diego, August 28.—A party of Englishmen are here, and start to-morrow to examine the Santa Rosa ranche, with a view of purchasing.

There is little hay in this valley this year, all having made grain.

From Bandor mining district we learn that the owners of Ready Relief mine while sinking for a foundation for new machinery some 300 to 400 feet below the mouth of their tunnel at the depth of 17 feet the workmen struck a vein of ore two feet in width and very rich in gold. This vein is ascertained to be the same ledge into which the Company has been tunnelling above and the discovery demonstrates the fact that at the depth of between 300 and 400 feet the vein continues wide and regular, and that it increases in richness. It is thus established beyond question that the Ready Relief is a rich permanent mine and its present purchasers may well feel jubilant, for their fortune is assured. In this discovery we have another proof that the quartz mines of San Diego county are true mines, not mere deposits and that their development promises a rich reward to the investment of capital.

Sacramento, August 28.—Governor Booth to-day commissioned Dewitt C. Thompson, Major General, N. G. C., vice John F. Miller, declined.

Kelseyville, August 28.—The Colusa Lake and Mendocino Telegraph Company completed their line to this place and opened an office here to-day. Superintendent Stanton will push the line to Calistoga, Middletown, Lower Lake, Knoxville and the Geysers, as rapidly as possible.

San Diego, August 28.—The trial of Wilson for the murder of Jas. Gray, was concluded this morning. The case was submitted at 12:30 last night. At 8 o'clock this morning the jury returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, fixing the penalty at imprisonment for life. McCarty his partner who was tried at the last term of the District Court and sentenced to 14 years, in all probability actually killed Gray, but Wilson was accessory to the crime and as the testimony showed, is by far the blackest scoundrel. Gray's and McCarty's firing, so far as the actual shooting is concerned, was simultaneous. The principal witness could not testify positively as to who fired the first shot, but the result was that Gray fell and this man Wilson during the affray, covered himself behind a tree close at hand. As soon as Wilson saw that Gray had fallen at the hands of McCarty, he darted out from his shelter, and while the poor victim was lying flat, with his face to the ground gasping his last, Wilson took a pistol from his (Gray's) body and deliberately placing the muzzle back of the ear sent a bullet through his brain.

Colusa, August 28.—The trial of M. Murray who has been on trial here for the past three days for the murder of the man Driscoll at Jacinto, was brought to a close to-night, as he was adjudged justifiable for shooting the man when forcibly entering his premises and carrying on his hoodlum abuse toward him and his wife. He was discharged from custody.

UTAH.

Salt Lake, August 28.—In the case of L. A. Brown, Probate Judge elect of Tooele county against the County Treasurer, peremptory mandamus was issued by the Third District Court, compelling the filing of bonds offered with judgment of $400. Notice was given of appeal.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Seattle, August 28.—The trial of William Siebert, who killed his father in Snohomish county last spring has been continued until the February term of the District Court.

ROUTE TO THE NEHALEM.

A letter to the Forest Grove Independent says:

Four different routes have been proposed for a road from the Tualatin Plains to the Nehalem valley. On each of these routes there is now a wagon road a part of the way, and a trail either a part or all of the rest of the way.

The first is the military road which does not run any considerable distance through the valley, and does not go within many miles of its best portions and hence is comparatively of little value to settlers.

The second route follows the railroad survey. The first eighteen miles is on the military road up the valleys of Gale's creek and Beaver creek to a point where the altitude is about 400 feet. It then turns a little to the east and in a single mile reaches the divide between Gale's creek and the Nehalem rising in that mile about 350 feet, or about one foot in fifteen. This is the only hill on the route and is 750 feet above the Grove. The road would then run down the valley of Castor creek about two miles to the Nehalem and through the whole length of the valuable portion of the valley.

The third route is up the west fork of Dairy Creek past Russell & Manning's mill, and thence over the mountains by a pass whose height is 1,100 feet reaching the Nehalem a little below where the second route reaches it. This route would have four or five miles of moderately hard mountain road but is entirely feasible.

The fourth and last of these proposed routes is the one over part of which a road has just been built at the expense of the State. It runs up one branch of Dairy Creek to a point about three miles above D. O. Quick's sawmill where the altitude is 121 feet, then northwest erly along the summit of the chain of mountains which can be seen to the north of us for about 10 miles to the valley of Pebble Creek. It then goes down the valley of Pebble Creek to the Nehalem at its most eastern point and at the best part of the valley. It then follows the railroad survey.

All About a Colored Rag.—New York, Aug. 17.—At the dedication of St. Anthony's parochial school the harmony was marred by a dispute between the Italian Society of the church and Father James. The Society desired to carry the Italian flag in the procession but the Father insisted that they should march under the Pontifical flag. Extreme feeling was displayed by some members and rather than surrender the emblem of the unity of Italy, the Society dispersed. The other nationalities—Ireland, American, Belgium, etc.—were represented by their respective flags.

SOUNDING THE ALARM.

Toledo, Benton County, Aug. 22, 1874.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Though not accustomed to placing my ideas on paper I have written upon the following subject because it is one in which every woman and man is or ought to be interested. By reading the papers and seeing the interest displayed and amount of energy wasted by the so called Women's Rights organization, I am more and more astonished that some one of these really talented women does not undertake to head a reform movement of quite a different nature: one to secure to us the blessing of being physically man's equal. Women at present are burdened with too many duties and obligations on account of this inequality. It is a well established and readily conceded theory that a really sound mind cannot exist without an excellent physical organization. If this be true where is the woman that shall undertake to prove herself equal to any more than present responsibility? My friends and fellow travelers in this world of affliction, for women, just for one moment imagine what a condition affairs would be in supposing men were as puny and helpless as the majority of women. Who would build our houses, cultivate our fields, grade our streets, man our ships, handle our merchandise and do the thousand and one things that require muscle and endurance? The absurdity of the supposition is laughable and yet it is pathetic. On the other hand imagine all women physically equal to man. What great things might we not accomplish. We would not wish to take men's work out of their hands; fields of usefulness would be open to us more than now and what a glorious abundance of energy and endurance we could bring to bear upon all our undertakings. Then should we be able to prove ourselves equal in all things to our husbands and brothers. It cannot be that the women of the present desire to elbow their husbands and brothers rudely about, but rather they seek (though mistakenly somewhat) to go lovingly hand in hand about the duties and responsibilities that rest upon us all. And this is right but the reform has not begun in the right place. The possession of all the political rights under the sun will not make women men's equals until they are totally reformed physically, and the woman or women who shall be able through the force of reason, eloquence, persuasion, or otherwise to inaugurate this reform will confer upon women and the human race at large a more enduring blessing than has ever been by armed victor or talented discoverer or inventor. The question first and foremost before American women should be How shall we recover perfect physical health and preserve it to our children after us?—not How shall we secure the right to vote and hold office? I am aware of the hedge of difficulties that beset this question, of the established custom of years and above all and hardest to surmount the pride and vanity of women. But if a few would start in earnest and begin the reform at home, and be up and as earnestly working for the success of it as they have been for the political rights they are striving for, they would be sure to succeed, for it is a subject that would at once recommend itself to suffering womanhood all over the land and if women have any judgment to be relied upon they would shortly avail themselves of the opportunity to emancipate themselves from this most galling bondage of fashion and folly.

First and foremost then the corset must be dispensed with. This is the beginning and chief cause of the difficulties that beset women everywhere, and it is the article hard to give up. Pride, not comfort, stands as a lion in the way. We are afraid of not exhibiting a pretty form. Well, there is one thing we do exhibit to perfection—the deformity of perfect helplessness and general good-for nothingness, of weak stomachs and weaker backs, of racking headaches, sleepless nights, fretful tempers and a distaste for vigorous action or anything else, except crochet-work and the corner of a sofa or an easy chair. Is the picture overdrawn? Not a bit of it. The trouble is, language is not powerful enough to do the subject justice. The mischief from the corset begins at the beginning of womanhood. If our girls were not allowed loose dresses and all the out-door exercise they wish before this time, and thus lay up a store of health for future supply, the result would be all the quicker discernable. As it is nature protests and protests, and the victim yields a little more every year, and gradually sinks into the helpless, half dead girl of the period, and when the responsibilities of maternity are laid upon them, the result is deplorable and the event a curse rather than a joy and blessing, as God designed it should be. The raising of a family would possess comparatively few terrors if women possessed robust health as they have a right to. As it is the idea of many children is a terror and dread, and no wonder. With scarcely physical force enough to go a mile or wait on themselves, how can they look up on the supplying the thousand and one wants of children as otherwise than a drag and an impossibility? With strength equal to the occasion, as I contend we might have, how glorious were the crown of motherhood; how we should joy in seeing our little ones growing up like olive plants about our table. Another thing, healthy mothers have healthy babies and the [illegible] part the care and anxiety, [illegible] fretful ones are. Every mother will agree, I am sure. So you see there are two horns to that proposition, healthy mothers have healthy children, and every way a desirable result arises.

Many of you will say you wear your corset loose. I do not think it can ever be worn loose enough to be no injury. We never dress loose enough. We should wear our clothes just as free about our waists as the men do, if we wish strong backs and stomachs. What right have we to suppose we are made to bear such undue pressure on one part and that vital too. Just try your husband with anything about his waist as tight as our ordinary dresses, see how quick he'll groan and declare he can't stand it and won't. No more ought we to. It is just this standing it generation after generation, year in and out, that has sapped our vital energies, and brought us to the puny, nervous, miserable creatures of to-day. Tight dresses totally unfit us for vigorous exercise, and when we do exert ourselves the blood rushes to our heads and we shortly pant for breath. Imagine a man in such a rig trying to lift or run or play a game of ball. It would be an utter impossibility. The corset stay in front presses directly upon the pit of the stomach and must hinder digestion and from a deranged stomach proceeds every evil woman is heir to. When the corset is drawn tight of course, any one can see that the evil is augmented, the whole form being crowded down out of place and the least exertion of lifting, running or long exercise on foot tends to produce very serious consequences and induces a long train of evils with which women are only too well acquainted especially in this country. The skirts should all be buttoned to a loose underwaist and the dress cannot be too loose. Wrappers are a blessing and can be made with few gathers, and need not be bunglesome.

If you have a large waist why undertake to secure health and happiness in the serene possession of it? Besides if we could once all bring ouselves to dress in this way, the oddity of appearance would soon pass away and we should have gained in health, buoyancy of spirits, and general good for somethingness far more than enough to compensate for the loss of our present butterfly appearance. There are always the beauties of colors in dress and the ornament of a cheerful happy disposition at the disposal of us all, the latter at present beyond the reach of thousands of us through physical misery and weakness.

The exercise of women is insufficient for health. Out-door exercise every day should be practiced. The way we dress now only moderate walking can be indulged in, and with defective respiration it does us no good. Who of us cannot look back to the time when we were school girls and never knew what an ache or pain was, what it was to be listless and miserable? If we had never seen a corset and always dressed as we did then and exercised out-doors every day we would be just as well to-day. There is no good reason to the contrary only that when the real tax on our systems began we encased them in vises and ceased exercise because it was not lady like. If our brothers had been taken at fifteen and dealt with in like manner would they not have been in the same condition to-day? They were allowed to grow as nature designed them, and the result is vigorous health and fine manly forms, while we are a nuisance to ourselves and a trial to our friends.

I often regret that I do not possess the brains and address of some of these sister reformers. I'd start out and lecture from one end of the country to the other and carry along a model dress for every woman to see and more ever wear one too.

I believe we are not past converting. Oh! that some one would come and lead us out of the labyrinth of ills that beset us and show us the healthy, heaven designed way to dress.

ARCADIA.

LETTER FROM REV. J. JAMES.

Dallas, August 26, 1874.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

In your weekly of the 22d inst. in the reports of the M. E. Conference it is stated:

"The name of the Rev. J. James was called. [illegible] His case seemed to be an anamolous one. There was nothing against his moral character and it was stated as an evidence of the esteem in which he was held, he had been appointed Postmaster at Dallas. The Bishop thought that was not 'evidence of good moral character.' A committee of inquiry in his case was appointed consisting of Revs. York, Hoberg, Cosper, Parrish and Doane. The committee was given leave to retire for the consideration of the case. * * *

J. JAMES CASE.

The committee on the case of Rev. J. James reported that he had left his work, had formally been notified and requested to locate but did it not, that he had been unacceptable and inefficient, and the committee charged him with general inefficiency and unacceptability and recommended that he be cited to appear before the Conference at its next annual session. Some discussion arose as to the legality and expediency of adopting the report. Some of the members thought the matter should be referred back to the committee, others said the case should be referred to the Presiding Elder. Mr. Driver thought that he would, if this was a court of equity, move to dispose of Bro. James on general principles. A wicked reporter suggested in a whisper that he should be put on a reservation. The discussion was terminated by a motion to locate Mr. James, which motion prevailed."

Now Mr. Editor, it so happens that Mr. James has lived in but a few places in Oregon—Corvallis, Dayton, Yaquina and Dallas, where he now lives. Will the man of equity please let him know the court that has set the precedent of deciding cases without trial, and in violation of the constitution and law governing in the case?

As to the charge of inefficiency and unacceptability, two of that committee knew that in 1869 Mr. James lived in the city of Corvallis which had been left to be supplied. The following statement and resolutions were made and sent to the then Presiding Elder N. Doane.

Corvallis, Sept. 14, 1869.

We the undersigned, being members of the M. E. Church, feeling our destitution together with many of the citizens of Corvallis, friends of the Church, in not having a minister to go before us in leading the devotional exercises and preaching for us especially on the Sabbath as heretofore, and

Whereas, The late Annual Conference from some cause failed to appoint a minister to Corvallis and having waited with the hope that the Presiding Elder might find a suitable person to supply us (and now it is with regret that we learn that he is unable to find the man to fill the place. Wherefore, in our extremity, to remedy the evil inasmuch as the Rev. J. James, who has been appointed to the Yaquina and still lives in our midst, and inasmuch as we are acquainted with him as a Christian minister (he having been a former pastor), wherefore

Resolved, That we do invite Rev. J. James to preach for us on the Sabbath while the place is unsupplied.

Resolved, Should the Presiding Elder approve of this our act, and change the relation of Bro. James from Yaquina to Corvallis, it will meet with our hearty approval.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Presiding Elder. * * *

In the hope of an Overruling Providence for good we subscribe our names: A. Holder, J. A. Holder, J. W. Williams, Elizabeth Williams, S. H. Thompson, H. L. Thompson, E. S. Altree, Jr., S. Altree and R. S. Feagles.

These facts were known to N. Doane and J. W. York and others of the Conference when this report was made. So much for the charge of "general unacceptability" as to Corvallis.

A word from one who was my Presiding Elder while on the Dayton Circuit:

Portland, April 20, 1870.

Dear Brother: I remember you with pleasure. In the days of other years we used to know each other. Can't you attend some of my camp-meetings? You and I used to have some good meetings together. Write soon, and give me all that good advice that will help me to do good, as I believe that success makes the man. How are matters going in the upper district? Give my love to your kind wife.

Yours, in Christ,

Rev. J. J. J. F. DeVORE.

I presume the Rev. I. D. Driver will not say that unacceptability was the reason why I left the work at the end of the second quarter with the record before him. Let him say what led to that result.

Now Mr. Editor, I am glad they left me with nothing against my moral character, notwithstanding the appointment to office be no evidence. It might be well if it were. It might save the Conference some trouble. Perhaps there was more in the "suggestion" of that wicked reporter than at a glance appears. It might be as well to have been appointed to reservations against whose moral character nothing is alleged as those who think "success makes the man." If I have violated law so that I must atone and I stand ready to meet any charge or insinuation made in that committee's report. In God is my trust and with nothing against my morals, I shall fear not any man.

With respect I am, yours truly,

J. JAMES.

No Yer Don't, Judge.—Scene in court. A witness examined who saw the assault on Mr. Brown.

Judge. Young man, do you know Mr. Brown?

Witness. No you don't Judge.

Judge. What do you mean by that sir? Answer my question. Do you know this Brown?

Witness. No you don't neither Judge.

Judge. Answer me, young man, or I will commit you for contempt of court. Do you know Brown?

Witness (applying his thumb to the tip of his nose and wriggling mysteriously his outspread and extended fingers). You can't come it, Judge. I know what yer want, yer want me to ask yer what Brown, and then yer going to say Brown Snout. Yer can't come it Judge.

A Pardonable Pun.—The London Hornet tells the following story: "Henri Rochefort occupied a box at the Opera Comique last week and was hooted at by the audience, one man shouting, 'He's a murderer!' Rochefort left his box to get his cab and then returned for his lady companion, but lost his way in the gloomy corridors. 'Ah,' exclaimed How ard Paul, meeting and directing him, 'you need your Lanterne here, Rochefort.' The ex-Communist smiled at the wit, but will never forgive the sarcasm."

The Reporter says the dead lock in the wheat market at McMinnville is broken. Six bushels and a half have been sold at 75 cents a bushel.

The health of Linn county is improving somewhat, but there are still quite a number of sufferers. Bilious fever seems to be the prevailing disease.

G. W. Siferte and associates are engaged at Clatsop in building a new steamboat for the Skipanon trade. The boat will be 60 feet in length, 18 feet beam and of only sufficient depth of water for the trade.

The Albany Register says: "The farmers talk of putting up a pool of 20,000 bushels of wheat as a market opener. Whether the pool will be offered to the highest bidder or a price will be set at which it will be sold, we have not learned."

An up-country editor apologizes for the scarcity of news in his last issue by saying that he had been badly demoralized by the news of the marriage of a maiden aunt by whom he set great store, hoping she would die single and remember him in her will.

The Albany Democrat is of the opinion that the next Oregon Legislature will be absolutely gobbled up and carried off in the arms of a bevy of determined women who will swarm about the Capitol, clamoring for "suffrage" and privileges and things.

Forty five acres of oats and thirty of wheat have been cut this week on the Penitentiary farm. Superintendent Watkinds estimates that the total yield of both crops will be about 1,300 bushels. Most all of the work necessary in making and saving the crop has been done by convict labor.

There was very near being a fire in Junction on the 21st inst. A little girl of a Mr. Wood, four or five years of age, undertook to carry fire from where an elder sister was engaged in washing near a hay stack, dropped some coals and set fire to the hay, which was entirely consumed before anything could be done to arrest the flames.

Mr. William Hall of the McMinnville Market received a severe gash in his left arm on Monday morning with a butcher knife. He was engaged in trimming a beef that was hanging up in the slaughter house, and in some manner he brought the arm with full force upon the point of the knife, driving the blade half way through the arm between the two bones near the wrist.

The Gazette is informed that the channel in Yaquina river near its mouth has materially changed during the year. The "middle channel, which was too shallow to be of any use except for small boats, has entirely filled up, throwing its water into the north channel," the largest and deep[illegible] better. Last week the schooner Theresa beat up from Newport to Oneatta, with her centerboard down, drawing eighteen feet of water.

An English paper has this to say of our State: "England indeed lost a beautiful country when she relinquished Oregon, a State nearly as large as Great Britain and Ireland combined. The State has unlimited resources, and a climate well adapted to Britons, it being rather humid, though by no means the rain sodden country we supposed. It possesses many attractions for the laborer as well as farmer and is therefore worthy the attention of those who wish to leave their motherland to woo fortune abroad."

Last Sunday evening a little daughter, six or seven years old, of Mr. Joseph Perkins, living near Carlton, was kicked in the head by a horse, and came fearfully near being killed. The horse was sharp-shod and where the shoe came in contact with the child's head it crushed in the skull, making a fracture three inches in length. One of the shoe-corks penetrated the skull bone so that the brains oozed out. It seems that the horse was tied to a horse-power, and the children were driving it around in play, imitating the work they had seen while the machine was in motion. The little girl, it is supposed, struck the horse with a stick and turned away, when the animal kicked and she received the blow in the side of the head. By the most watchful care the wound has been saved from inflammation, and we learn that the little sufferer is getting along remarkably well.

Mr. Creighton finished boring a well for Messrs. Shipley & Henkle, at their store, in Philomath on Tuesday last seventy four feet deep. At a depth of seventy feet he found a deposit of peculiar composition. It is a mixture of black sand and a hard, clayey substance apparently undergoing a transformation into stone and bearing the impress of leaves, like schist, together with something resembling charcoal. The substance is also studded with a metal similar to silver in quartz. In the same locality pieces of wood were found which have the appearance of having passed through fire. Water was not struck until the above depth was reached although there are many wells in the immediate vicinity none of them more than eighteen feet deep, which yield an abundance of water. The Gazette thinks Creighton must have gotten into an extinct crater of a silent volcano.

THE TERRITORIES.

Gov. Ferry has appointed Charles Brown, Esq., of Vancouver, a Notary Public.

Olympia sends forth another cry for a railroad. She has raised a cabbage head which weighs 65 pounds.

From a private letter from San Francisco, dated August 19th, which may be relied upon the Olympia Courier learns the following: The Colter bubble has burst. Nothing in it. A sensational fraud, invented by Colter and an accomplice for what reason has not yet been determined. There is no such person as W. W. Knowlton, who, as an attorney, started the advertisements to learn the whereabouts of Henry Colter.

The Dispatch, in speaking of Court matters at Seattle says: "One of the interesting features of the present session will be the discussion of Territorial politics—outside the court room of course. In regard to the Delegateship, the chief questions now discussed are: 'Will Kearney take it?' 'Can Jacobs get it?' it being understood that McNaught won't have it. All we can say in the matter is, we don't know. If Newell gets the Granger nomination, it will make the prospect very dark for the other candidates."

LATEST NEWS FROM CASSIAR.

From Victoria papers just received we glean the following intelligence from the above mines:

The Indians in the vicinity of Telegraph creek have been drunk to a fearful extent. The whites are in mortal terror of serious disturbances if a speedy remedy is not found.

Goods are being forwarded to the mines as fast as possible, and freights are on the rise. A great many miners are coming out.

Up to August 4th, only 4 beeves and 95 sheep remained at Dease Creek to supply 500 or 600 miners with fresh [illegible] at 65 cents per pound and by the end of this month there will be no fresh meat unless the overland trains arrive.

Most of the miners will go to Victoria this winter. At present there are about 1500 miners in the country. There are about ten boats started for Defotre. There may be about seventy men gone there, and a good many more are preparing.

John Calbr[illegible] arrived at Glenora Landing on the 6th of August, and reported a new claim called the Burr, six miles up creek, washing up 410 ozs. for the week, and the latter three days, 160, 130 and 120 respectively. Withal many of the boys [illegible] to be leaving. Packing is up to 50 cents [illegible] from T[illegible] creek. Mr. Calbr[illegible] rough times with the Indians, as they are demanding toll from the whites for plying in their waters. The principal cause is too much whisky.

The Colonist is authority for the statement that the Otter, which arrived at Victoria a few days ago, brought down $90,000 in gold dust.

The steamer Hope, which arrived at Glenora Landing on the 6th inst., brought about $20,000 in dust.

The express [illegible] left Dease [illegible] on the 10th inst., for Victoria, with $12,000 in gold dust.

A correspondent writing from Dease Creek, says: "For [illegible] of the creek there is one succession of wing-dams, wheels, pumps and sluices. The creek is turning out well—as well as any one expected. Six [illegible] of the [illegible] is paying from 8 cents to 10 cents per day, that has been the average pay of the creek. The miners are well satisfied that there is nothing in the bed of the creek. Flour was selling at 40 to 60 cents, bacon 75 [illegible], sugar 75 cents, tea $2 50 to $3. Provisions, as a general thing, have been very scarce on the creek all summer. If it was not for the Indians [illegible] the miners would have starved."

The health of the miners on Dease Creek, in general is bad, sudden change of weather—hot in the daytime and sharp white frosts in the night. Pack animals look well.

A correspondent writing from Wrangell, under date of 12th inst., says: "Miners are compelled to sell their gold dust [illegible] at the rate of $15 per oz., owing to the scarcity of coin or paper, and it is reported by those lately arrived from Dease creek that coin and bank bills are at a premium of ten per cent. Barnard's Express, in charge of Sylvester, arrived in three days from Dease creek, with $10,000 in dust. He reports times on Dease creek not so promising as when he was there before."

Another correspondent says: "The McIntyre claim was paying about the best, 30 to 40 ozs. a day of 24 hours to eight hands. The Brady claim was said to have yielded 300 ozs. in one week. This ground is very spotted. In places paying from $7 to $8 a day to the hand with rockers. After the expense of making sluices no pay could be obtained. About 12 miles of Thibert creek pays pretty well, but the pay dirt is only 12 to 18 inches thick, and is soon worked out."

A letter from Dease Creek, Aug. 10th, says: "The weather here now is wet and [illegible] ably cold, nearly bordering on snow. The miners are leaving for below at the rate of 10 or 15 a day. Every man who has a [illegible] good claim is selling out as soon as a purchaser is found, at one half less than what was asked six weeks ago. Many of the claims that were paying well are now compelled to discharge their hired help as being unable to pay them any longer."

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 29, 1874.

ANOTHER.

We sing not "arms and the man," but the man who wanted arms. Some of the most touching passages in the song of Moses the Third, which we have but recently related, are equally true of Ames the Only. This amiable gentleman, in an unguarded moment, was seduced into accepting the office of Governor of the sovereign and reconstructed State of Mississippi. It is the story of his sorrows that engages the attention of the people of that commonwealth at the present moment. Our readers cannot have forgotten how a short time ago it became apparent to the Lieut. Governor, in the absence of Governor Ames, that there would be a bloody riot at the city of Vicksburg before a great while, which the available militia would be wholly inadequate to quell; how the riot was to be "purely political;" how the Lieutenant Governor, as Commander-in-chief ad interim of the army and navy of Mississippi, ordered the disbanding of the same because he had reason to believe those formidable forces would decline to assist in quelling the "purely political" riot when it should come off; and how, when the militia refused to disband or lay down their arms, the Lieut. Governor, justly alarmed at such unexampled insubordination, made divers and sundry telegraphic requisitions upon the President for troops to be sent to Vicksburg to be held in readiness for an emergency, [illegible] ing the President in the most positive manner that the riot [illegible] was to come off would indeed be "purely political." Nor can any [illegible] how, when the President, with a [illegible] deference to the distress of the ad interim Governor and Commander-in-Chief, the Governor himself, whose [illegible] is [illegible] usted by none, was one of those [illegible] that always happen just at the right [illegible], arriving just in the nick of time, and having taken in the whole situation at a glance, telegraphed the President the full particulars of the danger, and urged the demand for Federal troops to quell the proposed riot. That was the voice of no ad interim, but of Ames himself, and yet Grant gave little heed, only referring the matter to the Secretary of War, who referred it to the Attorney-General, who referred it to the Assistant Attorney-General, who gave the Attorney-General an opinion adverse to the application, who communicated that opinion to the Secretary of War, who communicated it to the President, who directed the Secretary of War to communicate it to Ames, who received it and subsided—amiable man, that he is.

But the story is not all told. Of course the riot, which was to be purely political, did not take place according to the programme, there being no soldiers at hand to quell it. But the election which was to accompany it, and which was also to be "purely political," did come off, and the result was that the party that was to engage in the riot and be effectually quelled beat the party that was to do the quelling by somewhat more than a two-thirds majority. It was a very quiet election. There was not the slightest disturbance of any kind except that [illegible] It disturbed the equanimity of the riot-quelling party, whose occupation [illegible] supposed to be gone. People are generally satisfied when expected troubles do not come. But if every preparation which the most sagacious foresight could suggest has been made to have the trouble turned into a [illegible] of rejoicing, the case is different. So it was with Ames. The programme was spoiled, if peace was maintained. He is therefore aggrieved. He is out in a letter to a Jackson paper, in which he bemoans the fate of an amiable gentleman who gets taken in and done for as he has [illegible]. He believes the manager of the Republican party is a poor representative and embodiment of that ingratitude for which Republics [illegible] are proverbial. Ames is right. A man who is on the alert and knows when and how to act in an emergency, ought not to be snubbed. And then it was "purely political."

A SENSIBLE CRITICISM.

A great many people read Harper's Monthly Magazine, and on that account many have been led into the misery of James De Mille's serial stories. To all such the appended criticism, taken from Appleton's Journal, will be just as satisfactory as the gratification of a just [illegible] revenge on the body of that wretched author. The Journal will find a hearty sympathizer in every individual who has wrestled with the absurdities of "Cord and Creese," or the disgusting inanities of "The American Baron." We quote:

> Of all Mr. James DeMille's numerous attempts to divert the forces of nature and the laws of the ordinary world from their course, in order to make what he deems a thrilling story, certainly "The Living Link" is the strangest—may we say also the most unutterably absurd? A reviewer of the book might confine himself to saying that in it everything happens which in reality could not possibly happen, and nothing occurs which in reality [illegible] occur; but perhaps Mr. DeMille might justly demur to this style of criticism; and we will leave the whole matter to the final decision of the curious reader.
> If he does not decide that the heroic sacrifice on which the plot of the book depends is as unnatural as it would be foolish and criminal; the heroine is extremely stupid not to [illegible] the mystery which the reader fathoms when half-way through the book; that the very existence of this mystery in the midst of the surroundings described would be utterly impossible: that even a New York jury would not find the ludicrously erroneous verdicts that Mr. DeMille's juries perpetrate—if the reader does not agree with us upon these points, we abandon him to Mr. DeMille as a fit disciple, sure to be amused, and possibly to be instructed, by the school of novels which "The Living Link" very fairly represents.

THE REVEREND SEDUCER OF JERSEY CITY.

Revolting details of the crime alleged against Rev. Glendenning, of Jersey City, are making their appearance. The latest story is to the effect that in her ante-mortem statement, Mary Pomeroy, the unfortunate victim, said her clerical seducer procured from her, by force, a denial of his guilt. She tells her story in this wise:

> On the night after I found that I was in trouble, and after the matter had been talked over between Mr. Glendenning and myself, and he had assured me that everything would be all right, and nothing, as I supposed, that he would marry me, Mr. Glendenning came into the parlor. I was seated by the door. He approached the table, and after a few pleasant words had passed between us he said to me, "Mary, have you pen and ink? I want you to write something for me. You know what a scrape I am in, and I want you to [illegible] me, for if this thing goes out I am a ruined man." Then he began to dictate something for me to write, and I refused to do it because it was false. He then drew a revolver from his pocket and told me that I must write it. I was very much frightened, and all seemed dark and blank to me. I wrote whatever he told me, but what it was I cannot tell, except that it was something to shield him and set him right before the public and Church. I signed my name to the paper, and it is now in his possession, I suppose.

It is believed that Glendenning relies upon this paper for proof of his innocence.

The party managers in New York look on the political situation with apprehension. There is a Senator to be elected by the next Legislature, and Reuben E. Fenton, present Senator, is working hard and with some show of success for re-election. A Tribune correspondent, writing from Utica, says at a recent conference between Custom House officers at Long Branch, this ticket was considered: For Governor, Alonzo B. Cornell; for Lieutenant-Governor, Reuben E. Fenton. This correspondent says: "The blindest man could see what that would mean. Cornell to go to the Senate, Fenton to be Governor again." He adds:

> But there is every reason to believe that Mr. Fenton is not likely to be caught in that way. It looks now as if he were preparing to hold the balance of power in the next Legislature, and to observe to the Administration managers, with that sweet and gentle courtesy which always distinguishes him, that he proposes to return to the Senate himself, with or without their nomination; but that, if it is all the same to them, perhaps it would be wiser to decide it by the action of the regular Republican caucus.

The Chicago Tribune alludes to the prudent reticence of the Pennsylvania Republican Convention in regard to the currency, and [illegible] and adds: "One thing the Convention did speak of unequivocally, and that was the proposed Treaty of Reciprocity with Canada. That was condemned without a saving [illegible]. Whatever else they may be, the Pennsylvania Republicans will always be ironical lovers of their country." We have a mortal dread of puns and punsters, but that one is something over average.

Our San Francisco dispatches this morning contain the thrilling announcement that Gen. John F. Miller has finally declined to accept the appointment of Major-General of the California State Militia. After a patient study of the [illegible] in all its bearings, we have concluded that John F. did not do this momentous thing before he had surveyed the whole field with the [illegible] vision of a statesman, and had made up his mind to brave the gnawing remorse that always besets the American who [illegible].

Diligent students of Chicago journalism cannot fail to notice the brotherly love which prevails between the Tribune and the Times. Considerable rivalry has existed between the two papers in the matter of delivering their Sunday editions to Wisconsin readers. Each boasts a "special train;" but the Tribune alleges that the Times is sent out on a "regular milk train, which runs from Turner's Junction to Algonquin."

Where was David Dudley Field when the Brussels Congress was studying out the problems of peace and war? A Brussels letter says that nearly all the European States were represented, while the responsibility for the Western Continent was borne by a delegate from the Republic of San Salvador, who was "a sort of philanthropist and a self-appointed delegate."

A prominent gentleman of Oregon, Mo., writes to a Chicago exchange that the grasshoppers have reached the western part of the State, and that many of the inhabitants of the afflicted region are leaving for other localities, in anticipation of the suffering which will follow the destruction of their crops.

An Illinois exchange, which is not greatly pleased with the renomination of Gen. Garfield, tartly says "it sometimes becomes necessary to pension politicians on the party as a substitute for hush-money."

THE HISTORY OF BESSIE.

There has been an occasional mention in the Tilton-Beecher scandal of a young woman named Bessie, who, it seems, was one of the witnesses examined by the Investigating Committee, and of whom Mr. Tilton is reported to have made some revelations concerning her knowledge of the intimacy between his wife and Mr. Beecher. There is almost romantic history involved in the personality of Bessie, apart from her connection with the "great scandal." It appears from what has been learned in relation to her that she was literally a waif, who, when very young, presented herself at the door of Mr. Tilton's house and asked for shelter, as she had no home nor any friends to whom she could apply for assistance. She was taken in and kindly treated, and after a while it was discovered that she was the daughter of a well known Tammany politician, who had [illegible] divorced from his wife and refused to make any provision for his child. Lately it was discovered that the mother of Bessie was living in opulence in Fifth avenue, and the Tiltons took the young girl in a carriage one day to the splendid residence of her unnatural parent, who refused to see her or do anything for her. Bessie is said to have been a very docile, bright and amiable girl, quick to learn, fair in complexion, modest in demeanor, but of a sad drooping manner, as if she felt the presence of impending danger. The same saddening misfortunes which attended her from her infancy still appear to surround her in bringing her so conspicuously before the public in connection with the "great scandal."—Brooklyn Eagle.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

W. H. AIKEN, ATTORNEY AT LAW AND Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic in California and Nevada, will give prompt attention to the collection of Additional Travel Pay, now due California and Nevada Volunteers discharged more than three hundred miles from home. Soldiers can depend on fair dealing. Information given free of charge. When writing enclose stamp for reply and state company and regiment, and whether you have a discharge. Congress has extended the time for filing claims for additional Bounty under Act of July 28, 1866, to January, 1875, so all such claims must be made before that time. Original Bounty of $100 has been allowed all volunteers who enlisted before July 22d, 1861, for three years, if not paid the same when discharged. Land Warrants can be obtained for services rendered before 1855, but not for services in the late war. Pensions for late war and war of 1812 obtained and increased when allowed for less than disability warrants, but no pensions are allowed to Mexican and Florida war soldiers. State of Texas has granted Pensions to surviving veterans of Texas Revolution. New Orleans and Mobile Prize Money is now due and being paid. W. H. Aiken also attends to General Law and Collection Business.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 29 1874.

CITY.

A MAN STABBED—Information reached Police Headquarters yesterday evening about 6 30 o clock, that a man had been stabbed on the Indian ranch, situated below the city Chief Lappeus immediately procured an express wagon and started for the scene On arriving at the camp a man named Phil Johnson was found lying on the ground covered with gore, and stupid from the effects of liquor and loss of blood He was picked up and brought to the city jail, and a physician summoned An examination disclosed three ugly cuts—one [illegible] the elbow joint of the left arm an[other] just behind the left shoulder and a third on the left side Neither wound is regarded as [serious]ly dangerous and there is little doubt but what Johnson will recover with judicious [illegible] His wounds were dressed and at last accounts he was resting comfortably at the city jail Soon after the row a notorious half breed courtesan named Mary Philemon was arrested on suspicion of having done the stabbing On information obtained from the woman it became evident that a negro named Howard alias Boston who lives on the ranch had played a lively hand in the matter so an officer was sent down, and he taken into custody Both Howard and the woman are now lodged in jail Johnson, it is said went down to the camp early on Friday morning taking with him two bottles of whisky Doubtless the parties concerned became hilarious over the inspiring [illegible], and a general row ensued The knife with which the stabs were inflicted was secured by the Chief, and is now at the jail It is a long sharp and murderous looking weapon, and when skillfully used would make short work of a man The result of Johnson s wounds cannot be definitely determined as he lost much blood before the flow could be checked This morning an examination of the affair will take place in the Police Court

Wilson's circus was at Sedalia Mo on the 25th inst They met with an accident which is described by a correspondent as follows Just as the mail and express train for St Louis was taking us on behind—we have three flat cars, two box, one stock car and two pairs of coaches—they were traveling like sixty you bet, and on one of the flat cars the band wagon and seats were piled up high and long stakes driven in on the side to keep them together there was a dozen or more canvass men sleeping on the stuff, and the stakes gave way and spilled all the seats men and everything for seven or eight miles over bridges and culverts along the road before it could be found out, and the engine had to back down and pick up the men and stuff Some were hurt badly others bruised some, and they left the circus train and went on to Leavenworth and sent a switch engine out after the wreck " They will be in St Louis next week

There was a noticeable increase in the attendance at Oro Fino Theater last evening on the second appearance of Dr Haskell The Doctor s lecture on Temperance enjoyed a decided advantage over the one delivered the first evening in that it contained a number of telling points, and a far greater measure of coherency His remarks were interspersed with a number of both affecting and [illegible] anecdotes which were not lost on the audience The speaker acquitted himself better than on the preceding evening and the audience were not slow in manifestations of appreciation and a number of times the lecturer succeeded in bringing down the house Ventriloquial exhibitions concluded the performance This afternoon a matinee will be given No lecture will be delivered [illegible] experiments, spiritualistic and mesmeric exhibitions will constitute the performance To-night a grand mesmeric, spiritual, ventriloquial and sleight of hand performance will be given, the proceeds of which will be donated to one of the charitable organizations of Portland To morrow Dr Haskell will deliver his celebrated lecture on the "Magdalen

OUT-DOOR SPORTS.

The Pioneer Club have challenged the College boys to a series of games

This afternoon at three o clock Eph Maynard and Black Bess will trot at the White House course These horses are travelers and good time is expected

The Crescents are talking seriously of challenging the Pioneer Club This may seem a trivial matter, but the Crescents are capable of holding the older Clubs down and will do it when they make a trial

It would appear that the Astorian Club, according to the local paper of that place, beat the picked nine organized from the passengers of the Stephens on her last trip down We mention this in justice to the Astoria Club, who are deserving of all the honors won

At 1:30 P M St George Cricket Club will play the return game of cricket with the Pioneers As the base ballists are better posted it will not be such an easy matter for the cricketers to roll up a large score The cricketers will be represented by Messrs Rome, Sykes Gilman Good, Ford, Boyd Harrison, McDonald Trevett, Sturt and Floyd The base ballists will present a full eleven though several of their best players are not here

The Arcadians have played their first game of the tour, and it was to all appearances a one-sided affair and we believe they were short one player—Burk—who was to have joined them to-day Forty nine to nine were the figures and the boys must be happy over the event The game was played with the Astoria Club, on Thursday evening. If the above is the way they are going to treat the clubs down on the coast the base ballists there will feel very sore In the Fort Stevens Club they have no doubt found it a more difficult matter as that Club has a big reputation for ball playing During the tour the Arcadians have several games to play and we shall hear from them again by next mail.

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the aerial poisons that produce epidemic and endemic diseases but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enable us to counteract their malific influence The most powerful known antidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter s Stomach Bitters a pure botanical medicine, in which the finest antiseptic tonics, alteratives and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma and when ever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be present in the air this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers and in fact to all disorders generated by foul exhalations or impure water

A hypocrite is a most detestable character—if in morals he may only deceive himself, but when he experiments upon the lives of his fellowmen and hopes for advantage even to the injury of others he becomes pestiferous There are certain abominable dregs thrown together which are claimed to be curative a persistence in taking which will entail most unhappy results upon the sufferer When to this is added hypocrisy because they are claimed to be Temperance Drinks and all for money the outrage upon morals and humanity is complete But the old fashioned well tried PLANTATION BITTERS have gone right on doing their work well for all

Sore Throat.—The first approach of this terrible disease should be well watched for dies applied or else it will increase rapidly and do its deadly work suddenly A few drops of the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT applied by friction to the neck will remove the internal inflammation by external irritation The disease is rebuked and the patient speedily recovers Multitudes of lives have been saved by this embrocation

Ugly persons pretend to despise the doll baby beauty (so they invariably call it) of a cheerful happy belle. If such ever had any beauty they had long ago separated from it by using vile pigments and compounds which disfigure their faces and they pretend to despise the great boon of personal beauty Don't believe any woman who says she would not be pretty It is not natural The multitudes who use HAGAN S MAGNOLIA BALM and retain their beauty contradict any such assertion

Edward the Confessor.—The predecessor of William of Normandy who died in the same year that this country was subjugated had been educated in Normandy Upon his accession to the British throne, he attempted to introduce Norman fashions—he succeeded in all but the curtailment of the people's hair—the Saxons wore long hair and the Normans kept theirs close cropped The public bore every indignity but this nor could he or his successor, William make their subjects destroy their crown of glory But there are many men and women too who neglect their hair and lose its beauty when they might retain it by the use of LYON S KATHAIRON

THE HARVEST MOON

BY ELLEN P ALLERTON

Again the ripened grain is cleanly shorn
Again the earth her yearly bounty yields
Again the sheaves stand clustered in the fields
Like golden tents Along the tasseled corn
The night wind rustles and the orchard trees
Utter low whispers to each passing breeze

And once again hangs calmly over all
The harvest moon Beneath this dusky splendor
The dreamy summer softness sweet and tender
While cooling dews in balmy silence fall,
Come out and stand your arm about me—so
'Twas thus we stood together years ago

Just such a night as this! Just so the leaves
Whispered above our heads just so the corn
Rustled beside the wheat fields newly shorn
Just so like tents stood up the clustered sheaves
And royally above us on her throne
Of dusky blue sat the full harvest-moon

Well I remember what you said to me
Under the moonlight what were my replies
And what I read so clearly in your eyes
'Twas sweeter than the moonbeams And I see
Just as I saw it then that tender light
As then it shone on me, it shines to-night.

And that was long ago! We two have trod
Ways often steep and rugged and our rose
Has often borne its thorn yet still it blows
In fragrant clusters by the stony road.
Beneath the harvest-moon my eyes are wet
With happy tears—I keep my lover yet.

OUT OF THE STREETS

Although she was young and pretty and very rich and fashionable, Mrs Renwicke had a good kind heart and strove to fill her station in life with modesty and fidelity

When she married Mr Renwicke, the wealthy widower twelve years ago there were plenty of ill natured remarks by plenty of ill natured people and when Amy Renwicke presently ran away from her father's house and married a man of whom all her friends disapproved there was no lack of censorious tongues to say that Mrs Renwicke was at the bottom of it, and was doubtless glad enough to be rid of a handsome grown up step daughter That Mr Renwicke was too much taken up with his new wife to remember his old wife's daughter, all the world declared; for he had banished her from his heart forever, and would not hear her name mentioned by his most intimate friends But no one knew or indeed would have believed how Mrs. Renwicke grieved over her step-daughter's flight, and unjustly blamed herself as having been the possible cause. She sought in vain to soften the stern father's heart toward his disobedient daughter and when she saw that even her entreaties and tears failed to move him she gave up, knowing well that all other means were hopeless

From time to time she had heard of her step-daughter, and from her own ample allowance she was always ready to give generously, but the girl was stubborn and proud like her father, and it was difficult at times to assist her in such a way as she was willing to accept. When Mr Renwicke took his wife abroad with him, and in the period of their absence it was impossible for Mrs Renwicke to keep trace of Amy, whose silly pride prevented her from responding to her step-mother's kindness in the same spirit in which it was offered

Mrs Renwicke, returning with her husband to New York, after an absence of two years in Europe learned that Amy and her worthless husband were both dead, having fallen the victim to a prevailing epidemic the second winter after their runaway marriage Mrs. Renwicke broke the news to her husband, but she could scarcely tell how it affected him, for he heard with coldness and silence

Amy Walters had left one child—a girl—little more than an infant, and Mrs Renwicke, who would gladly have adopted and reared it as her own could gain no trace of it Mrs Renwicke had no children and the desire to discover and adopt the dead Amy's child was becoming a mania with her Mr Renwicke began to feel alarmed about his young wife for she was as good as she was lovely and his passion for her was quite justified by her merits. He begged her to tell him what it was that troubled her and, although she feared to tell him all, Mrs. Renwicke confessed a part of her grief

"You know, my dear husband," she said a little tremulously, and blushing very much "how I love children and since Heaven has not given us any I have been thinking that perhaps it is because there are so many in the world who have no homes and no mothers If every rich and childless woman were to adopt one of the poor little waifs with which our streets are filled, how much misery and crime might be prevented, and how much happiness might be conferred on those who never knew it before

This was quite a long speech for Mrs Renwicke and it was made with considerable haste too, and somewhat as if she expected to be interrupted before reaching the end But she need not have feared Mr Renwicke heard her in silence and he would have kept silence much longer if she had continued speaking And when his eyes met hers his look softened and he smiled gently on her for she really looked like a woman who ought to have children to care for—so fair so sweet such a pitying, loving sympathetic face, no child could look upon except with love and confidence

And so you want to adopt a child my pet? Bless your tender little heart! Adopt a dozen if you like have a special private foundling hospital of your own only don't worry me about them beyond drawing on me for as much money as you please To that extent I give you carte blanche.'

People called Mr Renwicke a stern, hard man—as indeed he was but his wife heard such comments regarding him with unfeigned surprise for never—except in the matter of his daughter's marriage—had she known him to be anything but kind and gentle The permission which he so lavishly accorded her gave her genuine delight, and flinging her snowy arms about his neck, she thanked him again and again And the worldly man of business who away from her never thought of anything but dollars thought himself sufficiently repaid by her embrace

It was now five years since Amy Walters died and Mrs Renwicke judged that the child she was in quest of must be about six years old She was not quite conscious of it but she always sought for children of that age, and always for girls having quite made up her mind to adopt some child, although she feared that her search for Amy's child would never be successful Many were the little wanderers whom she clothed and fed, for whom she provided comfortable homes A rich woman with money enough and the will to do it can open many doors to the homeless and friendless and Mrs Renwicke's means and will were equally good More than once she had almost decided on the adoption of some little girl but her heart cried out for the one she was in quest of, and bade her wait yet a little longer So she found protectors for the little ones she was interested in, and waited hoping against hope for the one that fate seemed to ordain for her She persuaded herself that she was destined to find the child of Henry Walters and morning and evening she prayed Heaven it might be soon In this way two years passed by, and Mrs Renwicke's lovely face and generous hand were well known in the haunts of misery and squalor and disease with which this great city is filled

Christmas time approached! This was of all the year the busiest season with Mrs Renwicke for at that time she found more cold and shivering little children abroad than at any other time and scores of the poor creatures had come to regard her as the good fairy which the most wretched of children have heard about. It was the day before Christmas and Mrs Renwicke was hurrying along Broadway having dismissed her carriage in order that she might be obliged to walk for exercise—like all rich women driving everywhere if only a block had become so much a habit that she indulged it unconsciously For the first time in years she had forgotten for the moment her little waifs and the especial desire of her heart She was preparing a Christmas surprise for her husband, and she was quite absorbed in the subject

Please give me a penny

It was such a pathetic little voice and so soft and sweet scarcely above a whisper and Mrs Renwicke didn't hear The child put out a little hand and caught her dress and then finding it such a rich and handsome dress held it tightly and pulled it as the wearer went rapidly past Mrs. Renwicke stopped and looked down at the little mite beside her not in anger but so gently that the child said again, shyly, and loosing her hold of the dress, but looking up with a confident expression

Please give me a penny!

The glance thrilled Mrs Renwicke to the very core of her heart, for it came from a pair of great soft brown eyes such as she had sought for in vain for nearly seven years She felt that her quest was ended, and she answered the child's request before asking her name

What do you want of a penny? she said

"I don't know Old Bess told me I must ask every lady I saw to give me a penny O there's another! Please give me a penny

A showily dressed woman turned and frowned on the child, and Mrs Renwicke smiled and said

You mustn't ask any more people for pennies. I will give you all the pennies you need

O will you Mrs How nice! I'm so glad because you can see I didn't like asking only old Bess said she'd beat me if I didn't, and I never will be—Jack never let any one beat me

Mrs Renwicke silently thanked Heaven that the child had not been seen in such usage for it was the second time that she was in the care of this old wretch. [illegible] often she had feared to find She asked only a couple of questions more

How many pennies have you got for old Bess

The child unclosed the fingers of a small delicate, but dirty little hand and showed a small collection of pennies—about half a dozen

And what is your name, little one

Amy Walters!

Mrs Renwicke felt that the child but echoed the name her own lips would have spoken but it was such a joyous assurance that she had found the little stray one at last that she caught her in her arms and covered the dirty little face with kisses much to the scandal of many elegant passers by

Mrs Renwicke soon realized that she was attracting an unpleasant degree of attention and signalling the nearest carriage she lifted little Amy into it and then from the child's rather unintelligible description started in search of the place she called home

It was not easily found but the carriage driver spurred to his best efforts by the promise of a goodly recompense, was at last successful It was a long drive however and before it came to an end Mrs Renwicke had learned all that the child knew of her own history She had been brought up since she could remember, in the house of the woman whom she called old Bess but had been the especial charge of Jack the old woman's grandson Jack had received little Amy from her mother who died in old Bess house, her father having died in the hospital a week before Amy knew nothing of her mother, except that she bore her name, and indeed that was all that Jack knew—dear old Jack, good old Jack He had always been so kind, and he called her his little girl, and took such care of her But now he was gone to sea, and old Bess said "she must make enough money, somehow, to pay for her keep

Mrs. Renwicke's thankfulness to Heaven that she had found the little one in time to save her from want and sorrow, was deep and fervent

Old Bess when at last found in a miserable room of a rickety tenement house, turned out to be rheumatic and bedridden, but with a decided tendency to drink Jack's mother who lived in another part of the house, "looked after her," and "kept an eye on little Amy Mrs. Renwicke found them quite willing to part with the child, for a consideration which she afforded to such a liberal extent that both women voluntarily gave her all the information regarding Amy's parents which they possessed It was meagre enough, but served as further proof that the child was Mr Renwicke's grand daughter A letter without any address, was also given to Mrs. Renwicke by Jack's mother, it contained Amy Renwicke's certificate of marriage, and also the date of little Amy's birth and baptism An unfinished letter in Amy Walters handwriting was enclosed, but, owing to the latter having no address upon it, the people who had cared for the orphan child were unable to make any use of it.

Mrs Renwicke was a joyful woman when she took her treasure home with her and Amy turned out to be a beautiful child under the renovating process of bathing and new fresh pretty clothes Her extreme resemblance to the dead Amy troubled Mrs Renwicke somewhat for she feared it would betray her parentage, and cause trouble with Mr Renwicke She had no fear of finally overcoming his objections but she wished the child to be established in the house first Her name was a serious object of debate in the lady's mind but happily she found from her baptismal record that she had a second name—Rose—and the child took a great liking to the new name it was so pretty dropping her old name in favor of it entirely

Mr Renwicke took such very little notice of children that Christmas passed and many weeks succeeded, before he once looked at little Rose closely enough to have known her again in the street if he had met her there and his wife saw with great delight that although he had gone so far as to compliment her on her choice, he really had not noticed the child's looks at all

Christmas time came again and Mr Renwicke acknowledged Rose's existence so far as to give her a magnificent Christmas tree laden with handsome presents The little girl's delight and gratitude were so vociferous as to attract more than his ordinary attention, and a look, as of sudden remembrance and recognition flashed a moment from his eyes but he said nothing and Mrs Renwicke was careful to avoid all remark that might lead to any special questions regarding Rose

Several years passed and Rose had grown into a tall and beautiful girl—so like her mother that Mrs Renwicke marveled if it could be possible her husband did not see the resemblance She began to wish that he would question her for her guileless nature was so averse to deceit of any kind that she often felt like a hypocrite notwithstanding the purity of her motives

Christmas time once more! A glorious clear night it was that ushered in the Christmas day The keen, frosty air had blown brilliant roses into Mrs Renwicke's cheeks and her husband complimented her beauty and the youthfulness of her appearance as she came after dinner and sat down beside him telling him of the many pleasures she had prepared for her various proteges to gladden their young hearts on the morrow

'And Rose?' asked Mr Renwicke holding his wife's hand and gently caressing it

Rose, is not forgotten, dear husband be sure

O, I am sure I think I am a little jealous of Rose. You don't give me half so many Christmas boxes since her arrival!"

Mrs. Renwicke laughed a merry sweet laugh, and declared he should have a lovely wax doll with blue eyes and yellow hair, just like Rose's

'Ain't Rose rather old for dolls dear? By the way, how old is Rose?

Mrs Renwicke's heart beat uncomfortably fast but she answered bravely

Rose will soon be twelve years old dear

Mr Renwicke started and his wife felt his clasp tighten on her fingers He looked away from her for some moments, gazing sadly into the bright coal fire She didn't speak and after a few minutes he spoke again very softly

Do you know pet I have had a strange fancy lately! If Amy had had a child I could swear that Rose was her daughter

Mrs Renwicke impulsively clasped both her husband's arms and looking entreatingly in his face exclaimed

Forgive me my own dear husband! Rose is Amy's daughter I couldn't tell you sooner O do you say you are not angry with me

Mr Renwicke's face was deathly white and his wife almost feared to look at him, but her gaze still rested on him earnestly longingly and she saw his face soften and tears slowly drop from his stern eyes Presently he turned and took her in his arms

My own sweet wife he said you have conquered me in spite of myself But even you never dreamed the heartbreak Amy's marriage was to me I hoped so much from her—I built all my future life on her till I met you and my first thoughts of you were prompted by the hope of your companionship for my daughter Well we will try once more Under your guidance, Rose cannot fail to grow up into the woman I vainly hoped Amy might have been My own best of wives ten thousand thanks for the Christmas gift you have given me this year!

Wheat in Liverpool by mail advices from San Francisco 10s 4d@11s for average California and 11s 11 12s for club

Our local finances appear to be very quiet, and no demand is made on the amount of available funds which perceptibly diminishes them but neither is there any material reduction of the rates of discount which have prevailed during the past two months The [illegible] considerable sums which have been husbanded with special reference to the grain trade are not idle the requirements from that direction [illegible] so far been very light. Nor in any other department of trade are there at present opportunities for investment which hold out inducement to borrow at current rates. Horse loans on first class securities are low

Eastern Markets.

[BY MAIL]

A New York dispatch of August [illegible] says the banks are beginning to remit currency to the interior for moving the crops but the remittances have not become sufficiently large to make an impression on the market Rates are ruling at about as low as they have been at any time during the summer Coin and bullion are light and the condition of the foreign commerce and foreign financial affairs is such as to expect the probability of an increased outflow especially as it is well known that profit attends remittance at the present rates for sterling

The new crop of wheat now arriving moderately fast but as the English limits have been materially reduced the prices have changed during the week fully ten cents per bushel notwithstanding the further decline in freights which are now at the lowest price reached in two years namely 4s 6d to [illegible] per quarter to the United Kingdom for floating cargoes [illegible] per bushel by steamer to Liverpool direct

Spring wheat closes at $1 1@1 20 for shipping grades and Winter at $1 [illegible] for red and white Flour is correspondingly lower with but a light export trade There is a decline in general business No general revival is to be noticed though from some parts there are indications of coming activity and particularly is this true of the leading kinds of manufactured goods

In dry goods the jobbers report an improvement in the trade They consider the prospects favorable for a profitable season and their correspondents in the interior report stocks comparatively small and collecting prompt

The bad reports of the English hop crop have led to speculative purchases of most of the remaining crop [illegible] here and in Boston As high as 40 cents has been paid. The crop reports from the hop districts in this state are generally favorable and picking will be commenced in a week or ten days meanwhile growers are not disposed to make contracts believing that higher prices must prevail

On the reports of prospective large supplies sugar has advanced ¼c California hides remain firm with a sale of 2 300 averaging 22 pounds The terms are private There has been no further decline in copper but the market continues unsettled

Coffee has further declined ½c

Pork and lard are lower the latter selling for 14@14½c in tierces Mess Pork is down to $22 75 for round lots The new crop of hog products for forward delivery are offered at materially lower prices Petroleum has had but little change Cases are retailing for 16½@20c according to the brand and package Butter advanced to 30@35c for prime States and to 28@31c for Western in firkins Cheese firm at 13@14c for good to prime State

Lard oil is quoted at $1 1 [illegible] and for December delivery 98c

Crude sperm oil has been sold at $1 60

Sugars and syrups are scarce and the prices tend upward

California leather is quoted at 30@35c with a poor demand

The tea market presents a better tone but the prices are not quotably higher

Tallow is higher—prime selling at 8¾@9c

Shipping Wheat.

The lapse of three so far has brought no new developments in this line of trade nor are there even any indications as what is to come after the present deadlock or what will break it up From different parts of the valley we learn that a very considerable portion of the crop has been threshed and much of it stored at points along the lines of transportation though but a very few lots have as yet changed hands In the meantime advices from Liverpool denote a strong tendency in prices to depreciate while freights do not seem to be any stronger on this coast and reports from New York say all branches of ocean carrying trade continue depressed and the rates of freight are quite generally down to a point from which no profit can be extracted by ship owners

With the above facts in view it would puzzle the most far seeing mind to form any satisfactory estimate of the result of present circumstances Should the vast quantities of wheat begin to move now, it would tax the carrying powers of the cars and boats to the utmost for awhile but it could soon be cleared out. The present highest figures given in Liverpool telegrams are 12 shillings, equal $2 88.4 per cental, or $1 72.8 per bushel. The nominal quotations here are $1 4@$ cental or 87 cents $ bushel About the lowest rates for tonnage from this port of which we have heard is £4 7s or $19 31 4 per ton Any one can figure up the margin on exportations as follows, on a vessel of say 1 000 tons

Cost of 33 333 bushels wheat at 87 cents	$28 999 71
Freight	19 314 00
Total	$48 313 71
Proceeds in Liverpool at 12s per cental	7 760 00

Leaving a balance of $9 446 29 out of which must come commissions say 5 per cent. on $57 760—2 888 and insurance 2½ per cent. on $28 999 71—$ 25 Here we have $1 613 more to deduct leaving $ 831 29 Again money is worth 10 per cent per annum to any average business man in this country and we may count on the shipper who pays cash down for his cargo being out of his money at least half a year $29 99 71—$1 449 98 leaving final margin for risks and other expenses not enumerated above, the sum of $4 351 31 certainly not a very encouraging showing

Shipping Intelligence.

THE HARVEST MOON

BY ELLEN P ALLERTON

Again the ripened grain is cleanly shorn
Again the earth her yearly bounty yields
Again the sheaves stand clustered in the fields
Like golden tents Along the tasseled corn
The night wind rustles, and the orchard trees
Utter low whispers to each passing breeze.

And once again hangs calmly over all
The harvest moon Beneath this dusky splendor
This dreamy summer softness sweet and tender
While cooling dews in [illegible] silence fall
Come out and stand your arm about me—so
'Twas thus we stood together years ago

Just such a night as this! Just so the leaves
Whispered above our heads just so the corn
Rustled beside the wheat-field newly shorn
Just so like tents stood up the clustered sheaves
And royally above us on her throne
Of dusky blue sat the full harvest-moon

Well I remember what you said to me
Under the moonlight what were my replies
And what I read so clearly in your eyes.
'Twas sweeter than the [illegible] and I see,
Just as I saw it then that tender light
As then it shone on me it shines to-night

And that was long ago We two have trod
Ways [illegible] and [illegible] and our rose
Has often borne its thorn yet still it blows
In fragrant cl[illegible] by the stony r[illegible]
Beneath the harvest-moon my eyes are wet
With happy tears—I keep my lover yet.

OUT OF THE STREETS

Although she was young and pretty and very rich and fashionable Mrs Renwicke had a good kind heart and strove to fill her station in life with modesty and fidelity

When she married Mr Renwicke the [illegible] plenty of ill natured remarks by plenty of ill natured people and when Amy Renwicke [illegible]ly ran away from her father's house and married a man of whom all her friends disapproved, there was no lack of [illegible] to say that Mrs Renwicke [illegible] the bottom of it, and was doubtless glad to be rid of a [illegible] grown-up [illegible]ter That Mr Renwicke was too [illegible] up with his new wife to [illegible] his old wife's daughter, all the world [illegible], for he had banished her from his heart [illegible], and would not hear her [illegible] by [illegible] most inti[illegible] But no one knew, or indeed [illegible] over her step-[illegible] and unjustly blamed herself as [illegible] the [illegible] She sought to soften the stern father's heart [illegible] daughter, and when she [illegible] her entreaties and tears [illegible] him, she [illegible] up, knowing well [illegible] to [illegible] she had [illegible] allowance she [illegible] generously but the girl was [illegible] like her [illegible] and it [illegible] times to [illegible] her [illegible] a way [illegible] willing to [illegible] Mr. [illegible] his wife [illegible] and in the [illegible]

Mrs [illegible] to New York, [illegible] Europe, [illegible] that Amy and her [illegible] husband [illegible] victim to a [illegible] epid[emic] [illegible] winter after their runaway marriage [illegible] Renwicke broke the news to her [illegible] she could [illegible] tell how it affected [illegible] he heard with coldness and [illegible]

Amy Walters had left one child—a girl—little more than an infant, and Mrs Renwicke, who would gladly have [illegible] her own could gain no trace of it Mrs Renwicke had no children, and the desire to discover and adopt the [illegible] Amy's child was becoming a mania with her Mr Renwicke began to feel alarmed about his young wife, for she was as good as she was lovely, and his passion for her was quite justified by her merits. He [illegible] her to tell him what it was that troubled her and although she feared to tell him all, Mrs. Renwicke confessed a part of her grief

"You know, my dear husband," she said a little tremulously, and blushing very much, "how I love children and since Heaven has not given us any, I have been thinking that perhaps it is be[cause there] are so many in the world who have no [homes], and no mothers If every rich and childless woman were to adopt one of the poor little waifs with which our streets are filled how much misery and crime might be prevented, and how much happiness might be conferred on those who never knew it before."

This was quite a long speech for Mrs Renwicke and it was made with considerable haste too, and somewhat as if she expected to be interrupted before reaching the end. But she need not have feared, Mr Renwicke heard her in silence and he would have kept silence much longer if she had continued speaking And when his eyes met hers, his look softened and he smiled gently on her for she really looked like a woman who ought to have children to care for so fair so sweet such a pitying loving sympathetic face, no child could look upon except with love and confidence

"And so you want to adopt a child, my pet? Bless your tender little heart! Adopt a dozen, if you like have a special private foundling hospital of your own only don't worry me about them, beyond drawing on me for as much money as you please To that extent I give you carte blanche."

People called Mr. Renwicke a stern, hard man—as indeed he was but his wife heard such con[illegible] [illegible]ding him with unfeigned surprise for never—except in the matter of his daughter's mar[riage]—had she known him to be anything but kind and gentle The permission which he so lavishly accorded her gave her genuine delight, and flinging her snowy arms about his neck, she [illegible] him again and again And the worldly man of business who [illegible] her, never thought of anything but dollars, thought himself sufficiently repaid by her embrace

It was now five years since Amy Walters died and Mrs Renwicke judged that the child she was in [illegible] years old She was not quite conscious of it but she always [illegible] for children of that age, and always for girls [illegible] quite [illegible] up her mind to adopt some child, although she feared that her search for Amy's child would never be successful Many were the little wanderers whom she cl[othe]d and fed, for whom she provided comfortable homes A rich woman with money enough and the will to do it can open many doors to the homeless and friendless, and Mrs. Renwicke's means and will were equally good More than once she had almost decided on the adoption of some little girl but her heart cried out for the one she was in quest of, and bade her wait yet a little longer So she found protectors for the little ones she was interested in, and waited hoping against hope for the one that fate seemed to ordain for her She persuaded herself that she was destined to find the child of Henry Walters and morning and evening she prayed Heaven it might be soon In this way two years passed by, and Mrs Renwicke's lovely face and generous hand were well known in the haunts of [illegible] and squalor and dis[illegible] with which this great city is filled.

Christmas time approached This was of all the year the b[illegible] with Mrs Renwicke for at that time she found more cold and shivering little children abroad than at any other time, and scores of the poor creatures had come to [regard] her as the good fairy which even the [mos]t wretched of children have heard about. It was the day before Christmas and Mrs Renwicke was hurrying along B[roadwa]y, having dismissed her carriage in order that she might be obliged to walk for exercise—like all rich women driving everywhere, if only a block, had become so much a habit that she indulged it unconsciously For the first time in years she had forgotten for the moment, her little waifs and the especial desire of her he[art] She was preparing a Christmas surprise for her husband, and she was quite absorbed in the subject.

"Please give me a penny"

It was such a [pa]thetic little voice, and so soft and sweet scarcely above a whisper and Mrs Renwicke didn't hear The child put out a little hand and caught her dress and then finding it such a rich and handsome dress, held it tightly and pulled it, as the w[ea]rer went [rapi]dly past Mrs. Renwicke stopped and look[ed] down at the little mite beside her not in anger, but so gently that the child said again shyly, and loosing her hold of the dress, but [illegible] up with a c[onfid]ent ex[pression]

"[Please] give me a penny"

The [illegible] Mrs. Renwicke to the very core of her heart, for it came from a pair of [illegible] she had sought for in [illegible] for nearly seven years She felt [illegible] was [illegible] and she answered the child's request before asking her name

"What do you want of a penny?" she said

"I don't know Old Bess said I must ask every lady I saw to give me a penny 'O there's another!' Please give me a penny

A showily dressed woman turned and frowned on the child, and Mrs. Renwicke smiled and said

"You mustn't ask any more people for pennies. I will give you all the pennies you need"

"O will you? My! How nice! I'm so glad because ma'am you see I didn't like asking only old Bess said she'd beat me if I didn't, and I never was beat—Jack never let any one touch me

Mrs Renwicke silently thanked Heaven that the child had not been accustomed to ill usage for it was to be seen at a glance that she was not one of the miserable abused little ones she had feared to find She asked only a couple of questions more

"How many pennies have you got for old Bess

The child unclosed the fingers of a slender delicate, but dirty little hand, and showed a small collection of pennies—about half a dozen

"And what is your name, little one

"Amy Walters"

Mrs Renwicke felt that the child but echoed the name her own lips would have spoken but it was such a joyous assurance that she had found the little stray one at last that she caught her in her arms and covered the dirty little face with kisses, much to the scandal of many elegant passers-by

Mrs Renwicke soon realized that she was attracting an unpleasant degree of attention and signalling the nearest carriage she lifted little Amy into it, and then, from the child's rather unintelligible description started in search of the place she called home

It was not easily found but the carriage driver spurred to his best efforts by the prom[ise] [illegible] successful It was a long drive however, and before it came to an end Mrs Renwicke had learned all that the child knew of her own history She had been brought up since she could remember, in the house of the woman whom she called old Bess but had been the especial charge of Jack, the old woman's grandson [who] had received little Amy from her mother [illegible] in old Bess' house, her father having died in the [illegible] a week before Amy [illegible] of her mother, except that she [illegible], and that was all that [illegible] old Jack, good old Jack, he [illegible] and he called her [illegible] care of her But [illegible] and old Bess said [illegible] somehow to [illegible] to Heaven [illegible] the little one in time to [illegible] and [illegible], was deep and [illegible]

[illegible] at last found in a miserable room of [illegible], turned out [illegible] but with a de[illegible] [Ame]'s mother, who [illegible] looked [illegible] on little Amy" [illegible] willing to [illegible] consideration, [illegible] a liberal extent, [illegible] gave her all the [illegible] parents which [illegible] enough, but [illegible] the child was Mr [illegible] a letter without [illegible] to Mrs. Renwicke [illegible] contained Amy Renwicke [illegible] and also the [illegible] handwriting [illegible] to the latter [illegible] who had [illegible]

Mrs. Renwicke was a joyful woman when she took her treasure home with her, and Amy turned out to be a beautiful child under the renovating process of bathing and new fresh pretty clothes. Her extreme resemblance to the dead Amy troubled Mrs. Renwicke somewhat, for she feared it would betray her parentage, and cause trouble with Mr. Renwicke She had no fear of finally overcoming his objections, but she wished the child to be established in the house first Her name was a serious object of [deba]te in the lady's mind, but happily she found from her baptismal record that she had a second name—Rose and the child took a great liking to the new name, it was so pretty dropping her old name in favor of it entirely

Mr Renwicke took such very little notice of children that Christmas passed, and many weeks succeeded, before he once looked at little Rose closely enough to have known her again in the street if he had met her there and his wife saw with great delight that, although he had gone so far as to compliment her on her choice, he really had not noticed the child's looks at all

Christmas time came again, and Mr Renwicke acknowledged Rose's existence so far as to give her a magnificent Christmas tree, laden with handsome presents The little girl's delight and gratitude were so vociferous as to attract more than his ordinary attention, and a look, as of sudden remembrance and recognition flashed a moment from his eyes, but he said nothing and Mrs Renwicke was careful to avoid all remark that might lead to any special questions regarding Rose

Several years passed and Rose had grown into a tall and beautiful girl—so like her mother that Mrs. Renwicke marveled if it could be [illegible] this her husband did not see the resemblance. She began to wish that he would question her for her guileless nature was so averse to deceit of any kind that she often felt like a hypocrite, notwithstanding the purity of her motives

Christmas time once more! A glorious, clear night it was that ushered in the Christmas day The keen, frosty air had blown brilliant roses into Mrs Renwicke's cheeks and her husband complimented her beauty and the youthfulness of her appearance as she came after dinner and sat down beside him telling him of the many pleasures she had prepared for her [illegible] proteges to gladden their young hearts on the morrow

"And Ro[se]?" asked Mr Renwicke holding his wife's hand and gently caressing it

"Rose, is not forgotten, dear husband be sure"

"O I am sure! I think I am a little jealous of Rose You don't give me half so many Christmas boxes since her arrival"

Mrs. Renwicke laughed a merry, sweet laugh, and declared he should have a lovely wax doll with blue eyes and yellow hair, just like Rose's

"Ain't Rose rather old for dolls dear? By the way, how old is Rose?

Mrs Renwicke's heart beat uncomfortably fast but she answered bravely,

"Rose will soon be twelve years old, dear

Mr Renwicke started and his wife felt his clasp tighten on her fingers. He looked away from her for some moments, gazing sadly into the bright coal fire She didn't speak and, after a few minutes, he spoke again very softly

"Do you know pet I have had a strange fancy lately? If Amy had had a child, I could swear that Rose was her daughter"

Mrs Renwicke impulsively clasped both her [husban]d's arms and looking [earnest]ly in his face, exclaimed

"Forgive me my own dear husband! Rose is Amy's daughter I couldn't tell you sooner O, do you say you are not angry with me

Mr Renwicke's face was deadly white, and his wife almost feared to look at him; but her gaze still rested on him earnestly longingly and she saw his face soften, and tears slowly drop from his stern eyes Presently he turned and took her in his arms

"My own sweet wife he said "you have [conquered] me in spite of myself. But even you never dreamed the heartbreak Amy's marriage was to me I hoped so much from her—I built all my future life on her till I met you and my first thoughts of you were prompted by the hope of your companionship for my daughter Well, we will try once more Under your guidance, Rose cannot fail to grow up into the woman I vainly hoped Amy might have been My own best of wives, ten thousand thanks for the Christmas gift you have given me this year?"

Our local finances appear to be very quiet, and no demand is made on the amount of available funds which perceptibly diminishes them but neither is there any material reduction of the rates of discount which have prevailed during the past two months The very considerable sums which have been husbanded with special reference to the grain trade are as yet idle the requirements from that direction having so far been very light. Nor in any other department of trade are there at present opportunities for investment which hold out inducements to borrow at current rates. House loans on first class securities are low

A New York dispatch of August 22d says the banks are beginning to remit currency to the interior for moving the crops, but the remittances have not become sufficiently large to make an impression on the market Rates are remaining about as low as they have been at any time during the summer Coin and bullion are light and the condition of the foreign commerce and foreign financial affairs is such as to expect the probability of an increased outflow, especially as it is well known that profit attends remittances at the present rates for sterling

The new crop of wheat is now arriving moderately fast but as the English limits have been materially reduced the prices have changed during the week fully ten cents per bushel, notwithstanding the further decline in freights which are now at the lowest price reached in two years namely 4s 6d to 4s per quarter to the United Kingdom for floating cargoes and 6d to 6½d per bushel by steamer to Liverpool direct

Spring wheat closes at $1 15a1 20 for shipping grades and Winter at $1 [illegible] for red and white Flour is correspondingly lower with but a slight export trade There is a decline in general business No general revival is to be noted though from some parts there are indications of coming activity, and particularly is this true of the leading kinds of manufactured goods

In dry goods the jobbers report an improvement in the trade. They consider the [illegible] favorable for a profitable season and their correspondents in the interior report stocks comparatively small and collecting prompt.

The bad reports of the English hop crop have led to speculative purchases of most of the remaining crop of 1873 here and in Boston As high as 30 cents has been paid The crop reports from the hop districts in this State are generally favorable and picking will be commenced in a week or ten days meanwhile growers are not disposed to make contracts believing that higher prices must prevail

On the reports of [illegible] (five large supplies sugar has advanced [illegible] California hides remain firm with a sale of 2,500 averaging 22 pounds. The terms are private There has been no further decline in copper, but the market continues unsettled

Coffee has further declined ⅛@¼c.

Pork and lard are lower, the latter selling for ¼@1½c in tierces M and P lots are down to $[illegible] 75 for round lots The new crop of hog products for forward delivery are offered at materially low prices. Petroleum has had but little change. Cases are retailing for 18½@20c according to the brand and package Butter advanced to [illegible] for prime States and to 28@31c for Western in firkins. Cheese is firm at 13@14c for good to prime state

Lard oil is quoted at $1@1 05 and for December delivery 90c.

Crude sperm oil has been sold at $1 60

Sugars and syrups are scarce and the prices tend upward.

California leather is quoted at 20@25c with a poor demand

The tea market presents a better tone, but the prices are not quotably higher

Tallow is higher—prime selling at 9½@8 [illegible]c

Shipping Wheat.

The lapse of time so far has brought no new developments in this line of trade nor are there even any indications as what is to come after the present dead lock or what is to break it up From different parts of the valley we learn that a very considerable proportion of the crop has been threshed and much of it stored at points along the lines of transportation though but a very few lots have as yet changed hands In the [illegible] advices from Liverpool denote a strong tendency in prices to depreciate while freights do not seem to be any stronger on this coast and reports from New York say all branches of ocean carrying trade continue depressed and the rates of freight are quite generally down to a point from which no profit can be extracted by ship-owners.

With the above facts in view it would puzzle the most far seeing mind to form any satisfactory estimate of the result of present circumstances. Should the vast quantities of wheat begin to move now it would tax the carrying powers of the cars and boats to the utmost for awhile but it could soon be cleared out. The present highest figures given in Liverpool [illegible] 4 per cental, or $1 72.8 per bushel. The [illegible] quotations here are $1 45 per cental at 87 cents per bushel About the lowest [illegible] for tonnage from this port of which we have heard is £4 5s or $19 [illegible] per ton Any one can [illegible] up the margin on exportations as follows, on a ve[ssel] of, say 1,000 tons

Freight	19 314 00
Total	$48,313 71
Proceeds in Liverpool at 12s per cental	57 760 00

Leaving a balance of $9,446 29 out of which must come commissions, say 5 per cent. on $57,760—$2,888 and insurance, 2½ per cent. on $28,999 71—$725 Here we have $3,613 more to deduct leaving $5,833 29 Again money is worth 10 per cent per annum to any average [illegible] man in this country and we may count on the ship[per] who pays cash down for his cargo, being out of his money at least half a year $28 999 71—$1,450 98 leaving final margin for risks and other exp[enses] not enumerated above, the sum of $4,383 31, certainly not a very encouraging showing

Important Intelligence Concerning the Wheat Crop in England.

NEW YORK August 29—A careful review of the English wheat crop by the New York Times, based on the annual reports of James Sanderson to the London [illegible] comes to the following conclusions England [illegible] three successive short crops prior to the present year which, though better is still 7 per cent below a general average of thirty bushels per acre [illegible] nothing like the crop of 1868, when according to Sanderson, grains of wheat averaged over sixty [illegible] thirty per cent above [illegible] The total yield this year is 100 000,000 bu[shels] [illegible] England's annual consumption is 190,000,000 [illegible] thus leaving a deficit of 90,000,000 bushels [illegible] drawn chiefly from the United States, which must supply at least half this amount, as Russia has no larger surplus this year than last Prices of wheat will undoubtedly be lower this year than since 1860, though the increased consumption always attending cheap bread in Europe may later have a reflex influence on values, so that the market will be found at remunerative prices for all the wheat we can spare seems equally certain
